CLOTHING.

Each child to be amply provided with clothing, plainly marked with full name.

When preferred, it will be supplied, by depositing a sufficient sum of money for that purpose, with the Superintendent.

VISITS.

There is no objection to parents visiting the Institution, subject to the following rules:—

1.—The frequency of the visits to be determined by the Superintendent. To some children it does good, to others harm.

2.—No sweet-meats, fruits or money, to be given to the children.

3.—They are not to be taken home except by permission of Superintendent. As a rule, once a year is quite often enough.

A WORD TO VISITORS.

On arrival, visitors will ask for the Superintendent, or his assistant, either of whom will receive them.

Cars leave corner of Market and Eighteenth Streets, Philadelphia, several times daily.

Nearest stopping place, Media.

On arrival at Media, passengers may be conveyed to and from the Institution by Henderson's Hack.

ANNUAL REPORT.

TO THE LEGISLATURE OF PENNSYLVANIA AND TO THE CONTRIBUTORS TO THE PENNSYLVANIA TRAINING SCHOOL FOR FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN.

The Directors of the PENNSYLVANIA TRAINING SCHOOL FOR FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN present this their Ninth Annual Report.

It is with devout gratitude to the Author of all good, that they congratulate their friends and the public on the condition of the Institution, and its labors for the past year. The south wing of the building is now completed, and the entire establishment fit for occupancy. Accommodation is thus provided for fifty additional pupils. During the year which has just closed, the number has increased from eighty-seven to one hundred and six. For full details in regard to their health, their physical and mental development, and their success in industrial efforts, the Board would refer to the Report of the Superintendent, which is annexed. Each year seems to furnish more conclusive proof that the condition of a large proportion of that class of children for whom such schools are established, admits of essential improvement. By a judicious combination of exercise, recreation and study, by a careful attention to diet, air and cleanliness, and by well-directed systems of labor, much is accomplished; much, also, by special treatment adapted to the peculiarities of each case. The Board feels itself encouraged by the past, and animated to press on, under the inspiration of faith and hope, to more strenuous efforts and more blessed results.

Owing to the suspension of postal and other means of communication, the Board has not been able to collect the bills of several pay-pupils. To that extent the customary income of the school has been diminished, while the expenses have remained as hitherto. The Board owes it to the Principal and his associates to state, that that they have offered to suspend, to a corresponding extent, the collection of their salaries, and to make their final payment in full, depend upon the collection of these debts. For conduct so considerate and generous, the Managers cannot but feel and express their high appreciation. They are most unwilling, however, to impose on faithful workers such a sacrifice, and they indulge the fond hope that generous friends of the cause in which we are engaged, will, by their contributions, render it unnecessary.

ALONZO POTTER,
President.

REPORT OF THE SUPERINTENDENT.

TO THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS :

The past year has been abundant in labors, trials, and experience ; and now at its close, it is my duty to lay before you the annual report.

First, that we have not been without signs of hope and blessing. Some of our little ones imprisoned in the gloom of imbecility, have been liberated from darkness and sorrow, to possess a share of light and gladness, such as they never knew before. Some have developed the fact of their capacity for self-support, and now enjoy the humble fruits of their own industry. These are signs of hope.

Others incurably imbecile, still, and always to be the children of despondency, linger among us, to kindle afresh, every day, the sense of gratitude to God that all are not as they are, and to invite by their very feebleness the strength of the strong to their aid ; these are signs of blessing : and with such incentives, drawn from the humble ministry of the imbecile's life, and under the more inspiring principle of duty, have the household borne the trust which has been confided to them through the past year.

Labors and trials have been sent to prove and to prune, and no single year of our history has been so instructive in experience, or so fruitful in results, as that which has just closed. A few things have been learned, and many more remain to be discovered, but by continued effort and more patient waiting, will all that is hoped for in connection with this Institution come to pass. As one of the few who have taken an active interest in this subject, I venture the declaration, that success will attend our efforts to improve the condition of the imbecile, if founded and conducted upon those principles which prompt to all true benevolent effort, viz.: love for the race, and love for the author of the race. To reduce the standard of labor in this behalf to a mere cold-handed charity, and dole out a subsistence that shall be measured by actual physical need, will by no means reach the mental and moral condition, which is the thing to be reached. An imbecile is not merely a depraved animal organism, which duty prompts us to keep alive with food and drink, and to protect with clothing and shelter; but an immortal being, shut up in a prison, panting for sunshine and yearning for love. If we fail to surround him with influences that shall supply his immortal longings, we fail to fulfil our duty towards him. It is one of the laws of our very life, that the weak are dependent upon the strong; we realize it fully in the outward physical world, but to appreciate it in connection with the inner life, requires the exercise of virtues, with which too many are strangely ignorant. Let us cultivate these virtues and press on hopefully in this noble work.

The following statement exhibits the condition and progress of the family:—

HOSPITAL DEPARTMENT.

No epidemic has visited us, and but two cases of severe illness, and one death have occurred during the year. In this department of our house, the gravest form of disease is epilepsy—but various phases of chronic infirmity are exhibited in many of our inmates, descriptions of which belong more appropriately to a medical paper, than to a report like this.

SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

The first lesson to be learned before any advancement can be made, is comprehended in the ORDER CLASS—which embraces the entire family of children who are not engaged in work. Their daily specific instructions and exercises in this department constitute the basis of operation for our whole system—order is the first law.

OBJECT LESSONS.—The form, size, color, consistence, uses and abuses of familiar objects, as household furniture, books, glass, paper, sponge, &c., every thing to which the eye is accustomed is presented in detail. Ideas are thus called forth, the expression of which indicates the several degrees of acuteness of mental perception, as well as the power of utterance, by which the teacher is led to a conception of the capacity of the pupils for other pursuits. After the most familiar objects are observed and studied, animals, buildings, implements of agriculture, simple machinery, and geometrical figures are learned, with reference to their practical uses in life.

The natural outgrowth of this beginning is found in drawing, writing, figures, geography, &c., all of which are based on form, size, and the arrangement of parts with each other.

DRAWING.—This class consists of ten members who make fair progress. Copying is more readily done, of course, than sketching, but some of the specimens are very creditable. The use of drawing is in the mental discipline, which is unconsciously acquired by the learner. Attention, imitation, comparison, arrangement, and construction, are all improved, while a present reward is found in the pleasure of doing and possessing something that is attractive.

WRITING.—This class consists of two divisions. The primary, eleven in number, begins with simple lines and forms on the slate, and are patiently working their way onward to the copy-book. There are twelve in the advanced class, some of whom are able to correspond with their friends.

GEOGRAPHY is taught to seventeen, and their progress is commendable.

ARITHMETIC.—The primary division in arithmetic, consists of twelve; their efforts are elementary, but the improvement is in some cases quite remarkable. The advanced class numbers twelve also. Four of these perform examples of reduction in compound numbers, and work out mentally, problems like the following:

$$86 \times 8 + 24 - 6 = 706$$

Examples in long division are performed by six of the class.

READING.—Twenty-seven children read—eleven in Saunder's Second Reader, five in Webb's Second Reader, four in Webb's First; seven use sentences on the black-board.

INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT.

The crowning advantage of such Institutions as this, it seems to me, is the development and application of the faculties of the feeble-minded for the purpose of usefulness, and, if possible, of self-support. During the past year we have been favored with an encouraging degree of success in this respect, as will be seen by the following tables:

HOUSE.—The larger girls are employed in domestic service part of the time, and some who are able to hold a needle are taught to sew. These have made 113 handkerchiefs, 170 towels, 2 sheets, 72 table napkins, and 32 pillow-cases, besides several pieces of fancy work.

Two boys have entire charge of the children's dining-rooms, scrubbing floors, washing dishes, cleaning knives, arranging tables, &c.

MATRESS SHOP.—Two boys have been able to manufacture the mattresses for our own use during the year, and the following will show the value of their work. They have had no assistance, because they needed none.

Matresses made,	.	.	.	102
Do. renewed,	.	.	.	23
Market value of their work, $334.

SHOE SHOP.—The results of the shoe shop may be seen by the following statement. One shoemaker has been employed as instructor, and there have been two of our pupils as apprentices. In addition to the mending, new work has been made as follows:

Boys and girls' boots,	.	122 pairs.
Do. do. shoes,	.	121 do.
Slippers,	.	67 do.
Gaiters,	.	10 do.
Market value, including mending, $582 11.

FARM.—The farm land is broken, and at present but little improved. Not more than forty acres have been available, but the value of the productions is fully equal to the expectations of the committee.

Nine boys work on the farm. Four of them were low idiots, one a semi-mute, and yet they are learning to make themselves useful, and to contribute to their own support. Your wisdom, in selecting a farm upon which to locate the Institution, is becoming more and more apparent every year. It is a valuable school for those who are committed to the charge of the Institution.

In closing this report, it remains for me thus publicly to offer my thanks to Dr. Kerlin, who has assisted me for five years past; to the teachers and officers who have continued in the service since last year, and to the employees of the house, for their zeal in the cause, in which I feel assured there is a growing interest among them.

To express my grateful appreciation of the repeated assurances I have had of your confidence and esteem, is likewise a duty which I am pleased to perform, and I may be allowed to express the earnest hope that, in all the future, we may not fail to cast our cares upon Him who careth for us, as we have abundant reason to acknowledge that His merciful guidance has been our safety in all the past.

Respectfully submitted,

JOSEPH PARRISH,

Superintendent.
